

About the Ngarra Yura logo

The words Ngarra Yura mean: To listen and hear the people. The words are from the Eora language group of the inner Sydney region.

How the Ngarra Yura logo was created

	The orange circle represents 'circle of trust' and the need to have faith in the judicial system and those who extend the hand of hope.
	The crimson circle represents the cultural differences and experiences that we are confronted within our communities. It highlights the need to work together and embrace those differences with optimism.
	The white dots represent the 'journey of learning' that we are embarking upon in this life time. It also represents that 'sacred law' is the balance between the physical and spiritual world.
	The Yellow symbol represents the women and the brown the men. It signifies the importance of gathering within the circle to discuss matters of importance. It reminds us of the purpose and need to hear and listen to one another.
	The rings of white circles in the middle of the orange circle represent our meeting place and the sacredness of gathering around the fire where honest, truth and wisdom is spoken and heard.
	The yellow symbol of circles and dots represents the sun, giver of life. It signifies the journey of rebirth, healing, justice and hope.
